Rea leboga!

Hi Office National Family Member

Rea Leboga! Rea Leboga go ba leloko la Office National!

What an exciting week it's been, and to round it off on this magnificent Friday, we have included the 5th letter in the "Phrase Generator" competition where you stand a chance to win R20 000 in cash. There are 10 letters in total which means you are already halfway there.

Don't forget that's not the only way in which you have the chance to win your share of R300 000 worth of prizes. Find details here on our website for the online Spin & Win where you can win discount vouchers to be used when making online purchases. The code is valid until 19 February, for personal purchases or corporate accounts, so don't delay. Also, keep an eye on the Office National Facebook page where you could win fantastic product hampers and prizes from our participating suppliers.

Habits that probably annoy your colleagues

Working in close space with others isn't always easy. The pressure of last-minute deadlines and workload stress is enough without having to put up with the annoying habits of your colleagues. Read on to make sure you aren't, in fact, that person:

1. Noise

Whether it be shouting across the open plan office, your phone that never stops ringing or loud music playing through your headphones, noise is annoying and distracting.

2. Aircon

Turning the aircon temperature up, turning it down as well as turning the aircon on or off without asking your colleagues is inconsiderate. Majority rules in these kinds of decisions and if you are often cold, take a jersey to work.

3. Questions

Whilst there is no such thing as a stupid question, asking questions that you could easily find the answers for on Google is annoying. The same with too many questions. And if you are someone who constantly asks the same questions that Google could answer, then you are, more than likely, annoying.
